ABOUT NOUVELLE-AQUITAINE	With 200,000 people studying in the region -- about half of whom are in Bordeaux -- Nouvelle-Aquitaine is an exciting place to be for research! World renowned for its wine, Bordeaux is also famous for the quality and number of its public institutions of higher education and research. The region boasts six universities -- in Bordeaux, Poitiers, Limoges, Pau, and La Rochelle -- representing 125,000 students. Nouvelle-Aquitaine is home to the main public research institutions, and outperforms the national average public scientific output by 5% (and over 7% in chemistry and applied biology-ecology).
FRENCH LANGUAGE PROFICIENCY	French language ability should be commensurate with the requirements of the project. Many host institutions offer language courses. Candidates who intend to improve their French language skills are preferred.
