In collaboration with the University Paris-Descartes, University Paris-Diderot and University Pierre et Marie Curie, the Institut Pasteur organizes an international doctoral program in Life Sciences and Biomedicine, the "Pasteur-Paris University International Doctoral Program" (PPU). This program is entirely organized in English.

The 2014-2015 call for enrollment of students in October 2015 is opened until November 21.

The PPU program is aimed at students holding, at the date of their enrolment in the program, a master degree or the equivalent in science, medicine and related fields from an university outside from France. The application call opens in October for an enrolment in the following October.

To present a candidate to the PPU program, thesis advisors must hold a HDR (Habilitation à Diriger les Recherches) diploma. The host laboratory must be located at Institut Pasteur in Paris. The research team must be affiliated with a doctoral school of University Paris-Descartes, University Pierre et Marie Curie or University Paris Diderot. Laboratories affiliated to doctoral schools from other universities cannot present candidates, yet.
